LETTERS FROM RUSSIANS TROOPS

Many Replied to Notes Found in
Hampers of Food Sent Them.

Petrograd, May 3.—Correspondence of the Associated Press.—More than three hundred letters from Russian soldiers have reached a prominent Petrograd woman in response to a note which she enclosed in a large number of hampers of food which she sent to the front a few weeks ago. She had expressed a desire to get some letters from the front which would show what the ordinary Russian soldier really thought, instead of the stereotyped letters of thanks with which the soldiers ordinarily acknowledge gifts from persons of higher social station. Accordingly she signed the notes which she enclosed with the names of her three maid servants, making it appear as if these young women had slipped the notes into the hampers surreptitiously. The receivers were asked to reply to these maid servants and to tell them how they were faring in the war.

The plan worked well. Fifty of the replies are to be published in book form shortly. Several soldiers replied in verse. Several made love in pretty, fanciful style. Only one letter out of the whole number was of a festive nature.

A Cossack sent the following pen picture of himself:

"I want to tell you what a Cossack looks like. He is not handsome, no, indeed! Yet he looks like an eagle, and whether the foe he meets be German or Austrian, he will beat him like an eagle. A Cossack is small, but brave. Small is the grain of gold, yet of great value. So is the Cossack, in his gray coat and waist held tightly in a leather belt. However hot the firing, he will not drop his gun, but will ride his brave horse and arrive in time, wherever he may be sent."

A scout tells of a reconnaissance from which he had just returned. "The moon shining as clear as if it were daylight and the German firing at us constantly and doing us much harm." He adds:

"Let my letter fly from the German land to the metropolitan town. I bow to you, sister Katinka. I am a hero from the river Don, fighting for our religion and our country. You and your friends listen to the holy bells calling the Christians to service. We hear only the roar of the cannon and the rattle of the German machine guns."

From Orenburg comes a pretty worded appeal for a pair of trousers: "My Dear Friend Katia—I hasten to inform you that I am in good health and all is flourishing with me. I am well and my horse is well, and for you I wish the same good health, and accept my deep devotion and let me bow to you. Against my will, tears coursed down my cheeks as I read your letter."

"I have an humble request to make of you. I do not ask for tobacco, for I do not smoke. But, if such be your kindness, pray send me an old pair of riding trousers, of which I am very much in need. If you have a divine spark of love for the soldiers who are defending their country, do not refuse what I ask."

One of the letters in poetry is roughly translated as follows:

"Greeting from all the hero soldiers: We shall end the war in glory For the Russian colors. And through the streets of Berlin Shall march the Russian regiments With the Giant at their head."

The Giant is a favorite soldier's name for the Grand Duke Nicholas.

NOTABLE BIRTHDAYS TODAY.

Prince Bernhard von Buelow, the famous German diplomat, who represents the Kaiser in Italy in the attempt to check diplomacy that would bring another enemy into the field against his native land, is 66 years old today. Although it has been repeatedly reported that his negotiations had been disrupted and that there had been a break between Austria and Italy, Prince von Buelow has declared his confidence in the "good sense" of the Italian people. The great German statesman was born at Klein-Flottbeck, in Prussia, on May 3, 1849. From early youth he has been familiar with the high politics and diplomacy of Germany. His real diplomatic career began at the Foreign Office in Berlin in 1874. He became famous at Petrograd, Vienna, Athens, Rome, Paris, Constantinople and Bucharest, but he never had an appointment in England or an opportunity to study English politics. In 1906 von Buelow became Chancellor of the German Empire, and it was while in that position he made the memorable statement that "between Germany and England there are no deep-rooted political differences." He was a great favorite with the Kaiser, who spoke of him as "my Bernhard," until von Buelow went to Potsdam a few years ago and suggested to William II that he must show "greater reserve" in speeches and in measures of National importance. It took moral courage to bear such a message, for he knew it meant a break in their relationship. Nothing in all his long years of public service was ever more dramatic than the scene in which the Emperor took leave of this faithful statesman. Faithful still to the Kaiser and the Fatherland, Prince von Buelow is using all his influence in Italy to bring that Nation into political relations with Germany. He married an Italian princess, Maria Camperio. They have a villa near Rome, which is just now the center of world interest, for it is the scene of great diplomatic effort.

Vice Admiral Sackville Hamilton Carden, commander of the allied fleet now trying to pass through the Dardanelles, is 58 years old today.

Julia Arthur (Mrs. B. P. Cheney), famous American actress, is 46 years old today.

Archbishop Edmond P. Prendergast of Philadelphia is 72 years old today.

Dr. Lincoln Hulley, president of Stetson University, Florida, is 50 years old today.

Henry S. Graves, Chief of the United States Forest Service, is 41 years old today.

Eppa Rixey Jr., pitcher of the Philadelphia National team, is 24 years old today.

GRAPE JUICE AT HOME.

Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture.

Washington, May 3.—Anybody who is able to can vegetables can make grape juice, says a new publication of the United States Department of Agriculture. Farmers' Bulletin 644. The principle is the same in both cases—the sterilization of the product before it is stored away. In case of grape juice this sterilization prevents the fermentation which in making wine turns the grape sugar into alcohol.

Fermentation is caused by various fungi, yeasts and bacteria, which adhere to the skins and stems of the grapes. If these are killed, no fermentation is possible. They can be killed in two ways, but one, the addition of antiseptics, is not possible in the case of any article intended for human consumption, because the antiseptics themselves are injurious. The other method, killing them by heat, is the one used in the pasteurization of milk, and is equally simple and practicable with grape juice. Practical tests indicate that grape juice is satisfactorily pasteurized without appreciable change of flavor when it is heated to a temperature varying from 165 degrees to 174 degrees Fahrenheit. If the temperature is allowed to reach 200 degrees Fahrenheit, the flavor of the juice is changed for the worse.

For home use there are a large number of varieties of grapes which will make a pleasant and healthful drink. No matter what the kind of grape, however, only clean, sound fruit should be used and it should be well ripened, but not overripe. The grapes should first be crushed and pressed in an ordinary cider mill if the farm possesses one, or by hand if no mill is available. The subsequent procedure depends upon whether a white or red juice is desired. For a light colored juice, the crushed grapes are put in a cloth sack and twisted until the greater part of the juice is extracted, one person holding each end of the sack. The juice is then put in some convenient form of double boiler in which it does not come into direct contact with the fire, but is surrounded by hot water, and gradually heated to a temperature close to 200 degrees Fahrenheit. As has already been said, however, it should not be allowed to go over this point. If no thermometer is available, it is best to heat the juice until it steams and then take it from the fire before it is allowed to boil. It should then be poured into a glass or enameled vessel and allowed to settle for twenty-four hours, after which it can be drained from the sediment and run through some form of cloth filter. The strain juice is then put into clean bottles and sterilized once more in a water bath. An ordinary wash boiler with a thin board on the bottom for the filled bottles to rest on is a convenient home device for this purpose. After sterilization the bottles should be corked immediately with new corks, the corks having been previously soaked for about thirty minutes in hot water.

For red juice, the crushed grapes are first heated to the same temperature as before and then strained through a clean cloth or drip bag without pressure. Thereafter, the process is the same as for light colored juice. Grape juice should be stored away in bottles or jars that are not too large, for after these have been opened the juice is likely to spoil. If properly made, however, the juice should keep indefinitely as long as it is kept in sealed bottles. In this respect it is, of course, like other canned goods, which should always be used as soon as possible after they have been opened.

Of the various varieties of grapes common to this country, the Delaware gives a juice of delicate aroma and excellent flavor. The Concord is darker with a sprightly taste and well known aroma. The Catawba, Isabella and Salem grapes also yield an excellent product. The California varieties produce a very sweet juice, but in many cases there is little characteristic flavor. For home use, however, the kind of grape that is most abundant in the vicinity will, of course, be used.

BAPTIST REVIVAL.

Sunday Was a Great Day, the Evangelist Delivering Five Sermons.

Great interest is being manifested by the people of Bryan in the revival at the First Baptist Church.

Since our last report a great many have professed faith in Christ and quite a number have united with the church.

Dr. Palmer and Prof. Wolslagel are delivering the message of sermon and song and the people of Bryan are hearing them gladly.

Sunday morning Dr. Palmer spoke to the Sunday school on the text, "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth," and a large company of young people accepted Christ as their Saviour.

At 11 o'clock he spoke on "The Deity of Christ." It was one of the ablest sermons ever delivered in Bryan. It was logical and forceful. It was learned and eloquent, it was powerful yet full of tenderness and love. The service was one long to be remembered and eternity alone can tell the good such a service will do. The arguments were such that the honest doubter and the worst skeptic alike would be convinced.

A great audience of men greeted the evangelists at the afternoon meeting for men only. Marked attention was given throughout the meeting to the gospel message and many men expressed a desire to become Christians and one strong man professed faith in Christ.

The night service—well, it was great. Many people came and went away, not thinking they could find a seat. The church was jammed and packed, but the ushers did splendid work and made the great throng comfortable.

The singing was a regular inspiration, both the singing by the choir and the solo by Prof. Wolslagel.

The sermon was on "The Unpardonable Sin." He said there was much confusion as to what the unpardonable sin was. Plainly, said he, it is ascribing to Jesus Christ power from Beelzebub to perform His righteous deeds. It is sinning against the Holy Ghost. It is not murder, or adultery, or profanity, or drunkenness, or gambling, but rather charging Christ with being in league with the devil in His work of love and mercy.

He said thousands of men and women have committed this awful crime and this sin is damning souls every day. If you have any desire for good and for God you may know that you have not committed this awful crime, for when men have committed this crime they are hardened against every appeal and nothing will move them away from their lives of iniquity and shame. An earnest appeal was made to forsake sin and come to Christ, and a large number came forward and united with the church and others came for prayer.

Services continue daily at 10 a. m. and 8 p. m.

Come. You will receive a welcome.
